

I collaborated with Ethan Garcia and Joshua Sundararaman on our homework. We exchanged ideas throughout the day, but we never let each other look at our papers. We only discussed what we thought was incorrect, like if someone's function was not working, we asked them, what test case broke, and if it was corresponding to something like the specifications, we would ask them if they double checked for the precondition to be true.