I collaborated with Taein Yi and Joshua Sundararaman on our homework. We exchanged ideas throughout the day, but we never let each other look at our code. We only discussed what we thought was incorrect, like if someone's function was not working, we asked them, what test case broke, and if it corresponded to something like the specifications, we would tell them to add the if statement to align with their specification and add the corresponding junit assertion.